Meigs And Meigs Accounting 9th Edition Solutions.Q: SQL Server Declarative Index I have an existing SQL Server 2008 database with about 60 million rows of data. I am trying to add a declarative index to a table that has a clustered index on a particular column. I can create the index after the fact, but I'd like to include it as part of the schema. Is there a way to do this? I am not familiar with the syntax for creating a declarative index. A: If you are going to use sp_addobject instead of sp_createindex you can include the nolock hint. SQL Server

2008 sp_addobject SQL Server 2008 :
CREATE INDEX in sp_createindex CREATE INDEX is part of the CREATE TABLE statements. It creates a NONCLUSTERED index A: You can do that with the ALTER
TABLE... INDEX statement. ALTER TABLE
mytable ADD INDEX (myIndexCol) GO If that doesn't work, you can also include the CREATE INDEX statement when adding the column, as Peter pointed out. ALTER TABLE
mytable ADD myIndexCol int NOT NULL GO CREATE INDEX myIndexName ON mytable (myIndexCol
